

The First Season of Badlands Cola Is Here

A Liminal Horror Story Celebrating Canada's Scariest Provincial Park

VANCOUVER, CANADA – June 21st, 2022 – Season One of Badlands Cola, a full-cast horror/mystery fiction podcast about liminal nightmares, an eldritch fossil cult, and hate-flirting, is premiering today across all major podcast platforms.

Listen to Episode 1: No Vacancy, out now.

Set in a region of Canada famous for its alien geography and paleontological history, Badlands Cola is written and produced by first-time showrunner, Renee Taylor Klint, and stars veteran voice actors Liz Morey (Roguemaker, Inn Between) and Briggon Snow (The Bright Sessions, Look Up). Cinematic sound design (courtesy of Sarah Buchynski and Russ More) and a lovingly curated soundtrack are core pillars for all twelve of this season's biweekly episodes, which average ~25 minutes of runtime.

Inspired by empty nighttime spaces, retro technology, and the haunting guitar licks of old psychedelia, Badlands Cola brings lush vintage atmospheres, perpetually bickering leads to root for, and plenty of eerie thrills for fans of the rising liminal horror subgenre.

Creator Klint says: "I have these memories of family camping trips in the Badlands. This epic landscape gives you a sense of being stuck between spaces, between times, and (terrifyingly) like you don't belong there. Badlands Cola was born from the desire to show listeners what it's like to sit on top of your car in the prehistoric desert, blast classic rock all night, and wonder what's out there watching back."

About Badlands Cola:

There's something in the mud. Badlands Cola is a cinematic mystery/horror fiction podcast by Renee Taylor Klint. In a desert town full of strange fossils and even stranger people, hard-hearted PI Sunny and broken-down radio jockey Strathcona attempt to dig up the skeletal past of a cult before it can reform.

www.BadlandsCola.com

Press Contact:

Name: Renee Taylor Klint

Email: BadlandsCola@gmail.com

Press Kit: badlandscola.com/press-kit

###